in a gold basin, and in his speech compared him to Henri Quatre—a bad comparison, for the latter came as a conqueror, poor Louis as a vanquished monarch. La Fayette was there at the head of the National Guard, The cry was, " Vive la nation ! " But when the King accepted the tri-colour cockade, they greeted him with ' Vive le Roi!"

At PHotel de Ville he was addressed by the Count de Lally TollendaL

The Queen was in dreadful fear until the King's return to Versailles; Monsieur remained with her all the time. The poor King came back sadly fatigued.

M. Necker has returned triumphant, and was received with honours, cannon-firing and illumina-tions. As he is so popular, it is to be hoped he will be of use in producing tranquility.

of the wretches who taunted him, as he stood on the scaffold, with " Tu as peur, tu tremble." "

Non," replied
he, "j'ai froid."
